FIRE SAFETY

Most fires can be prevented by simple precautions that everyone should know. The pictures in this book show some of the common hazards of the home, and what boys and girls can do to prevent fires from these causes. The pictures are in outline for coloring with crayons.

These pictures show only a few fire hazards—some of the hazards that boys and girls can do something about themselves. There are also other fire hazards that boys and girls should know about, including defective chimneys, wooden shingle roofs that may be set on fire by sparks, unsafe electrical wiring, gas appliances that need repair and other things that should be fixed by the grown-ups. They should also know about fire extinguishers, how to put out a fire in a person's clothing by smothering with a blanket or rug, and other features of fire safety. If in doubt about any fire hazard, ask your fire chief.
